I had a talk with Spencer Phenix about the Restitution Court and the duties of our various judges in Germany.

The Timberlakes lunched with us at home, and I held a staff meeting this afternoon.

Later, I saw John Mecklin of Time-Life to talk further about a subject he [redacted] raised yesterday during my conversation with the American journalists.

A lot of strange messages come in and go out of this office. On the agricultural side, we had one from the Department yesterday reading: "Rumored Germans intend liberalize ducks, geese, turkeys but not chickens at forthcoming GATT sessions. Can you verify?" The Agricultural Attaché replied as follows: "Agricultural liberalization list now being prepared and changes daily. Confidentially advised chickens were on list and subsequently removed. Also told in confidence turkeys, geese and ducks still on list. Embassy proposes take firm stand for return chickens to list in view clear-cut nature discrimination. We expect new fat back tender middle April."

E and I went to the 12:30 service at Stimson Memorial Church.

This afternoon things began to pop in Berlin. I was informed the Soviets had intercepted the flight of the C-130 but it had landed at Tempelhof. I had various calls on the subject during the course of the evening.
